Sound Familiar?

- I've been thinking about writing my book for years but I can never find the time
- Other coaches in my space have books — and they're getting the clients I should be getting
- I'm not a writer, but I know my life experience belongs in a book
- I don't know how to turn a book into actual coaching clients
- I'm worried I'll write it and nobody will read it
- I just don't know where to start

Why Most Coaching Books Fail

The book doesn't lead anywhere

Most coaches dump everything they know onto pages. No structure. No path. The reader finishes and thinks "that was nice" — and moves on. No call. No client. No money.

Your book needs to be built so the reader's last thought is "I need to work with this person."

Nobody ever sees it

Malcolm Gladwell never ran a single ad for his books. Tony Robbins doesn't run ads. They get people with big audiences to promote them. Most coaches skip this entirely. They put the book on Amazon and wait.

Author vs BESTSELLING Author

You can get a book on Amazon. But "an author" means nothing — there are over a million of them. A BESTSELLING author? That changes everything. That's what got Mynoo to the United Nations. That's what turned Aila from unknown to $200K in contracts.

We help you get all three right. In four weeks.
